Environmental and occupational health & safety guidelines

LEONI is one of the world's leading system partners and suppliers of wires, optical fibers, cables and cable systems through its Wire & Cable Solutions Division. As a global company, we are also aware of our responsibility in relation to worldwide and long-term challenges, such as demographic change, climate change and limited resources.

We carefully balance economic, ecological and social requirements and take our social responsibilities very seriously. We offer our customers reliable, high quality, environmentally-friendly products, which are produced in accordance with the relevant industrial safety and health regulations. We are committed to the continuous improvement of occupational health & safety (OH & S) standards and to the strengthening of environmental protection provisions.

The principles behind our work:

- Continuous improvement in environmental performance through the definition and implementation of targets
- Reduction in the environmental impact of our products and processes through the economically viable use of the best available technology
- Efficient use of environmental resources and energy
- Avoidance of injury and illness among our employees through the preventive identification of risks and effective emergency defence
- Compliance with all legal duties in relation to environmental and OH & S and other requirements. The relevant national standards are minimum requirements.
- We establish and encourage mutual trust through open dialogue with our employees, customers and suppliers as well as with the statutory authorities and the public at large.

A sustained approach ensures the future of our business.
